Beginners have to build their own learning path.

Since 2026, candidates have been able to self-study for nine role-based CISO exams. The source material sits across rules, guidance and laws.

CISO publishes each exam's materials without a consolidated study book. A beginner must piece together the vocabulary and context before practising the judgment the exam tests.

I built a guided route through the material:
foundations, regulation, practice and feedback.

I started by teaching the language.

5 CH 5 - TAKING ON A CLIENT 6 / 11 ☆

NEW TERM - ACCOUNT APPROPRIATENESS

Is this even the right kind of account?

Before asking whether an investment suits someone, ask whether the account and service suit them at all. That is account appropriateness, and it is checked at opening and on material change.

You meet it by explaining what each account type does and costs, so the client lands in the right one. It is a different test from suitability, which operates trade by trade and portfolio-wide.

WHAT CHANGED

Vocabulary is introduced before recall, then checked inside the lesson.

The explanation and knowledge check appear together, so each new term is taught before it is tested.

The first release covers a full CIRE course.

The first audit exposed an answer-length cue.

Correct answers were too often the longest option. I rewrote 98 distractors and measured the cue again.

That audit shaped the product.
Every question needs a trail that can be inspected, corrected and

1 E1 · REGULATORY FRAMEWORK 1 / 20 ☆

1 1.2 · CIRO

CIRO is the pan-Canadian self-regulatory organization: it oversees Investment Dealers, Mutual Fund Dealers and all trading on Canada's debt and equity marketplaces. It writes two main rule books, the IDPC Rules (how a dealer runs its business and treats clients) and UMIR (how orders and trades must behave in the market).

READ THE COURSE CHAPTER ON THIS →

A supervisor is looking for the rule that governs how a client's order must be handled to achieve best execution. Which book, and why?

1-4 TO ANSWER · ENTER TO CONTINUE

- A IDPC Rules, because they cover all conduct by a dealer's employees
- B UMIR, because it governs order handling and trading on marketplaces
- C National Instrument 45-106, because it governs order flow
- D The Bank Act, because dealers are deposit-taking institutions

Designed and built by Daniel Sultan. The course, the wording, the questions and the way it all fits together are mine. The rules themselves come from CIRO, drawing on the CIRE syllabus (January 2025), the published practice exam and the guide for studying. This is a study aid. Where anything here differs from CIRO's own rules, guidance or syllabus, CIRE governs.

I built the on-ramp I needed.

I work in frontline financial sales while preparing for the CIRE. I started working at 14 and learned by building clubs, community projects, tutoring and software.

I found the problem while studying, built the course, and then discovered a flaw in my own question bank. Fixing it changed how I think about the whole product.

The next year is about retention, one paying pilot and the RSE.

01

Learners return

Run structured pilots and measure completion, retention and where people get stuck.

02

Institutions will pay

Interview employers and educators; test a cohort, reporting and update-management offer.

03

The engine transfers

Ship the Retail Securities Exam module using the same source, audit and versioning workflow.

With Techstars, I can run these tests faster and learn from people who have built education and financial-services companies.
